DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This farmhouse is located on the north side of Roxbury Road just north of Benevola and north of Boonsboro in Washington County, Maryland. The house is located on a bluff overlooking Beaver Creek and faces east. The principal entrance is now the rear or west wall.

The house rests on limestone foundations which become a full story in height at the east elevation. It is seven bays in length with its walls constructed of limestone and brick. The entire wall surface has been painted red and the foundations grey. The stone section of the house consists of its four western bays. The three eastern bays appear to be a brick addition. Flat arches of stone are present above openings. In the brick section windows are topped with wide wooden lintels.

In the west end wall of the stone section is a round plastered tablet. Its windows are aligned with each other in the walls. Some have older massive frames, their joints secured with wooden pegs. These frames are retained at the second story level. At the first story, most of the window frames are narrow. Nine over six pane sashes are used at the first story while six over six pane sashes are used above. In the brick addition narrow frames have sashes like those described in the stone section. At the first story level in the north and west walls, no two over two pane sashes are used.

Main story entrances in the east wall have been made into windows. Two doors are present in the east foundation wall. Presently the main entrances are in the west wall with one door each in the brick and stone sections. The doors are plain and do not include transoms.

The house has a modern asphalt shingle roof which extends beyond the end walls. Large brick chimneys are located inside the end walls of the stone section and inside the north end of the brick addition.

Behind the house is a frame bank barn and a modern dairy barn.

The buildings appear to be in good condition.
